DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) The invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 8-10 and 12-14 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by (USPN 6,228,062) Howell et al.

Howell discloses the same invention as claimed being a torque device comprising a guidewire (24), a split seam sheath (36), handle (32) with a lumen (60) extending there through, a side-port (46) to remove the sheath from the guidewire, an extension arm (10) having an a tubular extension (shown near the reference character 58 in figure 5) and an opening for receiving both the guidewire and sheath.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-4, 7, and 15-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103 as being unpatentable over (FPD FR 2580504) Pieronne in view of (USPN 6,228,062) Howell et al.

Art Unit: 3738

Pieronne discloses the invention substantially as claimed being an embolic filtering system comprising an expandable filter frame (1), a filter element (11), and a split seam sheath (16). However, Pieronne does not disclose all the structural elements of the torque device.

Howell teaches the use of a locking torque device comprising a guidewire (24), a split seam sheath (36), handle (32) with a lumen (60) extending there through, a funnel shaped side-port (46 shown in figure 5) to remove the sheath from the guidewire, a locking mechanism (comprising elements 50 and 52), an extension arm (10) having an a tubular extension (shown near the reference character 58 in figure 5) and an opening for receiving both the guidewire and sheath, and a member (34) for preventing kinking of the guidewire in the same field of endeavor for the purpose of providing the user with enhanced ability to lock and maneuver the sheath and guidewire.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to combine the torque member as taught by Howell with the embolic filtering system of Pieronne in order to provide the operator better control of the sheath during its separation from the guidewire.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 5/15/06 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

The applicant argues that the guidewire of Howell as identified by the examiner does not function as a guidewire is known to in the medical field. However as clearly stated by the applicant the guidewire of Howell is "used to insert the catheter 14 into the patient", which is exactly what guidewires are used for in the medical art. The wire guides the catheter to and into the patient.

The applicant further argues that the Howell device is not designed to split from proximal retraction of the sheath. However the examiner is interpreting the rear end of Howell to be the proximal end. Therefore the device of Howell splits its sheath through proximal retraction.

The applicant's final argument is that element 19 of Pieronne is not a torque device, however this is not a proper argument because the rejection is relying upon the torque device taught by Howell and not that of Pieronne.
